THE PROFECTIVE PRINCIPLE.

The Cauadian Pacific's Request to be Bonded Will be Denied.

[Special to THE HERALD—Examine: Dispatch.]

Washington, offay 29.—The solicitor of the treasury will have ready in a few days his opinion on the application of the Canadian Pacific rallway to be bonded to carry goods to and from points in the United States. Colonel Hepburn will undoubtedly decide that the bond cannot be given to a foreign corporation, unless the secretary of the treasury is disposed to reverse the opinion of his law efficer. This will settle the matter. This action by the treasury is department, will be heralded as a triumph of the protective principle, but its effect will be very small, as the Canadian Pacific already transports goods across the continent to and from points in the United States by means of its American branches. If it were permitted by give a bond it would acquire a little more social footing and perhaps guin some formal advantages. Her they would be trifling in comparison with the essential privileges which it already enjoys. Two foreign corporations have given the bonds the Canadian Pacific desires to, the Canadia Southern and the Grand Trunk roads. The matter is only generally adhied to in the statutes in section 2004. All the details of the present system have grown by maler the regulation of the treasury department.

Pacific Mail Report. charming and able gentleman, is that the President could have made so important an appointment without inquiring who the man was. The second wonder is that he has not required Mr. Blaine's immediate resignation for recommending a man with such a war history. Mr. Blaine knows Mr. Tucker; he knows him as a Blaine man, and a well-known man about town. He seems to have expected to score a political point in his appointment, and he over-reached himself, as he has often done before. The President will hardly take Mr. Blaine's recommendations with his eyes shut again. His brilliant secretary of state has so thoroughly wound him up that there are those who believe he did it on purpose. This is hardly cradible, however, for it in jures Mr. Blaine as much as the President. Some Ropublicans arms that the appointment having been made, it was the part of courage for the President to stick to it. Mr. Tucker, they say, had small bonorary appointments from Grant and Garffeld, and if the President had braved it out, the matter would not have attracted nearly so much attention as it has now, after the ridiculous expedient of sending a clork to the newspaper row with acksors in his hands to cut the name off the list of appointments at least an hour after they had been left at the Exameter and other leading newspaper offices.
